Why TOPS for Sales Training Reinforcement?

Much of today's sales training is delivered as a one-to-three day event where sales people learn new skills and experience success through role-play and practice. Often after a sales training event, sales people go back to work with high hopes for better results. However, no matter how impactful the training was, the effects usually begin to taper off after a few months.

Today's busy sales managers typically have good intentions toward coaching and reinforcement, but often lack the time and resources to effectively put in place a successful coaching plan.

Janek's TOPS system solves these two common problems for the sales manager. It offers easy to use, viable tools and templates designed to support the sales manager in the implementation and execution of a sustainable reinforcement and coaching plan. It provides a well-thought out format that is both comprehensive and flexible enough to fit into any of today's sales environments. TOPS ensures sales managers have everything they need, when they need to provide effective and dynamic coaching and reinforcement to their sales team members.

"The training was excellent. The trainer did an incredible job connecting with the team and making the message relevant. Every member of the team I have spoken with the past two day as has raved about the program. We are very pleased."
